Professional Practices: Good or Bad Work Ethics

GPS: ACCT-AGD-2, ACCT-AGD-3

Objective: Given a work sheet, a team and a topic, determine if the employee is displaying good or bad work ethics. Each team will present their findings to the class. Complete the worksheet with a 80% or higher score.

Steps:

1. Go to your group.
2. Find your topic below. Topic will be labeled with your group number.
3. Discuss the topic with your group. Stay within your 15 minute time limit.
4. Write a brief summary of your topic.
5. Determine a group spokesperson.
6. Present findings to the class.

Grading Scale (to be completed by each team member)

Rate each team member 1 to 5 (1 being the worst and 5 being the best) on each of the following:

1. Participated in the discussion
2. Participated in the summary
3. Had a good attitude

Topics:

Group 1:

You are the lunchtime host at a popular restaurant. The waiting list is 30 minutes long. A customer offers you $20 to seat his party next. Would it be ethical to accept the offer? Explain your answer.

Group 2:

You are the lunchtime host at a popular restaurant. The waiting list is 30 minutes long. A customer offers you $20 to seat his party next. Would it be ethical to accept the offer? Explain your answer.

Group 3:

You are at the end of your shift and your work is complete. Through no fault of his own, another worker has had problems all day and hasn't finished his assignments. What should you do?

Group 4:

You have sustained an injury on company time, but you were not actively working when the injury occurred. Your employer wants to take care of your medical expenses and give you time off from work even though you are still capable of performing your work duties. What do you do?

Group 5:

A customer is particularly rude. It isn't your job to work directly with the customer, but he insists on telling you his problems. What should you do?
